

I strongly oppose this rule.

It violates our rights under the Constitution of due process, right to hear one's accuser and see the evidence, and presumption of innocence until proven guilty.

It will destroy pilots' careers, and create an unaccountable bureaucracy.

There also needs to be a workable appeal process with the FAA.

This makes as much sense as giving unaccountable security guards at hospitals the ability to subjectively revoke a doctor's license to practice, or parking attendants empowered to confiscate drivers licenses.

I grew up thinking this kind of regulation would be found in countries like Nazi Germany, the Soviet Union, or North Korea. But not in the USA, the land of the free???

If this rule goes into effect, the impact on terrorists will be negligible, but the impact on American citizens will be devastating.
